

AI Jobs Market Analysis

CodeAlpha Data Analytics Internship Report

Top Job Roles

Observation: Data Engineer is the most demanded role.

Insight: Organizations are investing heavily in data infrastructure and analytics talent.

Job Categories Distribution

Observation: Data Science and Research dominates the dataset.

Insight: Companies are increasingly adopting AI and advanced analytics.

Salary by Experience Level

Observation: Executive and Senior roles earn higher salaries.

Insight: Experience and specialized expertise strongly influence compensation.

Work Setting Distribution

Observation: In-person jobs form the largest share.

Insight: Remote work remains significant in technical roles.

Highest Paying Countries

Observation: Qatar and several developed markets offer high salaries.

Insight: Regional demand and economic factors influence compensation.

Salary Trend Over Years

Observation: Average salaries increased from 2020 to 2023.

Insight: AI talent demand continues to grow globally.

Company Size vs Salary

Observation: Medium and large companies pay more on average.

Insight: Larger organizations often provide stronger compensation packages.

Employment Type Distribution

Observation: Full-time roles dominate.

Insight: Organizations prefer long-term AI and data professionals.

Employee Residence Distribution

Observation: The United States has the largest employee base.

Insight: The U.S. remains a major hub for AI talent.

Average Salary by Job Category

Observation: Machine Learning and AI roles earn the highest salaries.

Insight: Specialized AI skills command premium compensation.

Key Findings

- AI and Data Science demand is growing.
- Salaries increase with experience.
- Full-time employment dominates the market.
- Machine Learning and AI roles offer the highest compensation.

Conclusion

The analysis reveals strong growth in the AI job market, increasing salaries, and significant demand for skilled professionals across data-focused roles.